Silent Night!

During the holiday season, so many things grab our attention! Commercials for the latest and greatest things, Christmas decorations across the aisle from the Halloween decorations and somewhere in the middle of all of that, is Thanksgiving! There are events to go to every time you turn around! Parties, programs at school, recitals, concerts, and church programs. We want to do it all it seems. I am learning that it is ok if I don't make it to everything. The world will still go on if I don't!

I recently left an event and needed to stop by the store on the way home. The traffic was busy, so I took the long way home. I'm glad I did. I had Christmas music playing the car and got to enjoy Christmas lights from several businesses and homes. It gave me a chance to reflect on the upcoming weeks of the holiday season, it gave me a little quiet time and brought joy to my heart!

Don't get so busy this season that you miss the opportunities to just be in the moment and enjoy the quiet. It is good for your mind, your heart and your soul. Sit in the dark with just the lights from your Christmas tree and praise and worship music on. Take a moment or several moments to reflect on that first Christmas night and celebrate the awe and wonder of that baby boy that was born in a manger. He gave us the ultimate gift of taking on the sins of all of us so that we might be saved.

From our family to yours,
We wish you the most wonderful Christmas season!

Stephen and Hope's Corner

Hello everyone and happy holidays!

Recently we visited Stephen in Manhattan, Kansas where he works as a flight instructor. We went to the local discovery center and had a blast visiting all the local attractions.

Stephen is continuing to finish his flight hours so he can move to commercial airlines and he's also finishing up his degree in business at MSU.

I am still working towards getting my junior freeskate passed (second to last freeskate test). And have a Christmas show in December.

Phill and Katie are doing great and they are getting ready to welcome their baby boy in February.
